

Washington Unified School District Partners with Community Groups to Improve Student Vision

One of Washington Unified's top priorities is for all elementary students to be reading on grade level by the third grade. The district is grateful for its community partners: CalViva Health, the Tsu Chi Mobile Clinic, and the Easton Lions Club for their role in helping students obtain glasses so that they can achieve their academic goals.

"Making sure that kids can see the words in front of them is a critical piece in the district's plan for all students to be literate by the third grade. Our intense focus on best first instruction and strategies designed to support English Learners won't help if a student can't see the material," stated Educational Support Services Director, Cathy Troxell. The district's partnerships with CalViva Health, the Tsu Chi Mobile Clinic, and the Easton Lions Club highlights the need for different agencies in the community to get involved when it comes to supporting students.

Washington Unified is excited to continue its long standing partnership with the Easton Lions Club in an effort to provide vision services to families in need. Students at the district's elementary sites can be referred for services at any time during the year and are provided with high quality vision screening and, if necessary, free prescription lenses in order to help them reach their academic potential.

Washington Unified School District most recently partnered with CalViva Health and Tsu Chi Vision Mobile Clinic, to provide 43 students at West Fresno Elementary School with free vision examinations and a free pair of glasses! "We cannot thank CalViva's Courtney Shapiro and her team enough for including WUSD in this partnership," stated Washington Unified's Assistant Superintendent, Hank Gutierrez, "the students and parents of West Fresno Elementary School have been afforded a life changing experience." The partnership was part of a broader effort by the Children's Movement of Fresno, whose aim is to facilitate and advocate for positive outcomes for children throughout the community. Washington Unified is grateful for its community partners who make it possible for us to serve our students well.

According to their website, the cultural center aims to celebrate the arts in Mexico, Latin America, the Southwest, and California. All exhibits are "culturally educational and family friendly." The Artés Americas Cultural Center has dedicated space to display artwork, host concerts and classes, and to host performances that honor Latino arts.

The girls' work will also be featured at Washington Unified's upcoming Visual and Performing Arts Showcase. ## West Fresno Elementary's Community Literacy Night Draws Record Crowds

For the fourth year in a row, West Fresno Elementary School hosted a Community Literacy Night in order to provide local families with the resources needed to promote literacy in their homes. The event aims to promote a literacy rich environment for families to replicate in their homes through interactive centers, online resources, and book distributions. This year's event attracted a record number of participants as almost 300 students, plus their family members attended.

lastic, Familius and LLC. The Fresno County Superintendent of Schools was also present to help drive home the night's message about the importance of family literacy. The Fresno County Library was on site for the event, helping families to obtain library cards that they can use both online and in various Fresno County Library locations.

This year's theme was Superheroes, as evidenced by over twelve superhero themed interactive stations set up for families. Batman Boggle, Brave Hero Bingo, and Wonder Woman Song Stories were just three of the booths that participants enjoyed. One of the night's highlights was a special guest appearance by Batman, who spoke to students about the importance of reading every-day! Learning Director and Literacy Night coordinator, Sabrina Green said, "It is amazing to see so many families come out for such an important cause. It truly shows our parent's desire for their children to be successful."

Students and their families also enjoyed a free dinner and each child left the event with a free book donated by Scho-

American Union Elementary's Caeden Steele Wins National Racing Competition

American Union Elementary School student, Caeden Steele, has been racing since he was 5 years old. Inspired by his dad's love of racing, Caeden began racing quads at a young age and later Sprint cars, developing his own love of the sport. "I like the competitive part of racing because it's fun," explained Caeden. Although Caeden's favorite car is a Corvette, he wants to stick with Sprint car racing because he prefers racing on the clay dirt track as opposed to the road.

Caeden's dedication to the sport has paid off. This past December Steele competed in the 32nd Annual Tulsa Shootout.

The five-day competition had a record 1,249 entries among 615 drivers in nine classes, making it the biggest racing event in the country! Caeden drove with his father and uncle 29 hours across the country to compete in the event, eventually winning first place in the Junior Sprints feature of the national racing event.

Caeden's success isn't just limited to the race track. Caeden is an active student at American Union. He participates in the school's Gifted and Talented Education (G.A.T.E.) Program, is an honor roll student, and plays multiple sports including basketball and flag football.

Join us is celebrating Caeden's huge win as the National Junior Sprint Winner!

Washington Union High School HOSA Students Participate in Capitol Leadership Experience

College and career ready. While this phrase encapsulates the vision of the Washington Unified School District, it isn't just about having good grades and being able to land a job. Being college and career ready means that students are prepared to navigate the world after high school in a meaningful way. It means that they are able to use their experiences and their education to make a difference in their own lives and in the lives of others.

One way that students are learning to make a difference in the world around them is through studying and participating in local and state government. This past February, Washington Union High School seniors, Eric Manzo, Liseth Santos, and Jesus Crispin experienced the state legislature first hand by visiting the capitol and observing Senate and Assembly Committee Hearings and Floor Sessions. The culmination of their trip was a chance to meet directly with State Assembly member Dr. Joaquin Arambula, to talk about Cal-HOSA: Future Health Professionals.

According to the Cal-HOSA website, their mission is to: "promote career opportunities in the health care industry and to enhance the delivery of quality health care to all people." Washington Union's HOSA chapter has been active since the inception of the Health Institute, an award winning Washington Union High School career technical education pathway. Manzo, Santos, and Crispin discussed the student organization with Dr. Arambula and it's importance for students throughout California.

"It is important for the youth of America to be educated in Civics and Government to ensure that they have an informed opinion," states Washington Unified Curriculum and Instruction Director John Sherron, "Democracy cannot be taken for granted. Our country depends on an informed citizenry and experiences like the HOSA students visit to the Capitol help ensure that our young people are equipped to participate in our government in a meaningful way." Sherron also cited the success of Washington Union's Mock Election, held in November, where students participated in a mock presidential vote and voted on 3 state assembly bills. It is hoped that experiences like these will equip Washington Union's students to participate in our country's decision making process.

Alternative Education Program Expands to Offer Online Diploma Completion Classes to Community Through Cyber High

Earning a high school diploma can lead to better opportunities for students when it comes to career options and salary potential. Washington Unified's Alternative Education Program is pleased to announce that it can now offer diploma completion classes to adults in the community. The program is open to adults, ages 18 and older who are looking to earn a high school diploma.

Courses are offered online through Cyber High and are designed to be easily accessed from most devices. "Many adults are juggling multiple responsibilities, including jobs and children," explained Learning Director Grant Thor, "To add a demanding class schedule on top of that makes it hard for some to achieve their goals of earning a high school diploma. The online format gives adults the flexibility to be able to complete coursework at any time and from various locations."

Students can enroll through the Adult Education Office by contacting Principal Glen Freeman or Learning Director Grant Thor at 495-5602 or 485-8805 ex. 599. Interested students are encouraged to contact the Adult Education Office for a review of their transcripts to see how the program might work for them.
